COMFORT CONNECTION

VOLUME VI ISSUE 1
SPRING 2012

Point Taken

Everybody wants to stand out and be different, in a good sort of way. Some people are mathematicians and some are artists. Our specialty is residential air conditioning and heating. When a customer is spending thousands of dollars on a new system, it should be designed for their comfort needs. Every house is as different and unique as the family that lives there. When I moved into my new home, I hated climbing on a ladder and changing five filters every month, plus I have asthma. So for me it was important to have a Space Guard filter installed and a purification system to improve the air quality.

A new system installed on leaky ductwork is a waste of money. Your ductwork effects the quality of the air as well as the delivery. We do not cover leaking ductwork under blown insulation. Unless recently replaced, it only makes sense to replace the vent pipe. Old vent pipe attached to a new furnace is one way to cut corners and sell a job cheaper. Why take a risk of leaving something old in place that could leak and cause harm to your family. Your equipment will have surge protection. We put our electronics on power strips so your air conditioner should be protected as well. It is not uncommon for drain lines to clog. Even a bug crawling in a PVC pipe can cause it to stop up not to mention normal algae growth. If your drain line backs up, a safety device called a wet switch will shut your unit down to prevent costly water damage. Locking refrigerant caps also go on our installations. These locking caps are opened with special keys sold only to licensed HVAC companies. One it deters "huffing" of refrigerants which can be deadly and second they have an o-ring gasket that prevents accidental leakage through the Schraeder valve.

Our employees will always be in company uniforms and driving company vehicles. We call first, so you know when we are on our way. A quality assurance check is done on every job and a city permit pulled. Pulling a permit is easy unfortunately not all companies follow through and have the actual inspection performed. We want you to have the confidence that our work has passed all state and city safety codes.

These are a few of the many things we do to be different. Call us with any questions, our office staff is always willing to help. If you are one of our many military folks we thank you for your service. See our records on-line with BBB and Angie's List Super Service Award winners. Visit with us again this year at the Missions ballpark we love talking with you! Don't forget to visit our website at countywideservice.com and fill out our customer service survey.

Stay safe and have a great summer!
